DATE IDEAS

Take Your Vape For A Hike

There's nothing like going for a hike with the person you love, and getting elevated, if you catch our drift.

However, keeping a sense of your surroundings is critical so just keep it light!

Get Baked While Baking

Baking is a really fun thing to do with someone you like, and baking while getting baked with someone you love is even better. Decide on a simple, delicious recipe that you and your partner will both enjoy, roll up your sleeves, turn on your favorite tunes, and get to it!

Netflix & Cheef

If you or your partner don't typically like to go out in public, especially in the midst of a pandemic, you are certainly not alone! Grab your best bud, all of your favorite snacks and binge watch a show together. You don't need to plan a big date night to enjoy Valentine's Day, and sometimes, staying in is simply more fun.

Mukbang a New Restaurant

Stuffing your face while elevated can be very enjoyable, so why not turn it into a date? A mukbang, also known as an eating show, is an extreme eating trend where vloggers record themselves eating mass quantities of food. You and your partner can order everything that looks good off a menu and then pig out at home!

Wake & Bake Brunch

Brunch is easily the best meal of the day.

What's better than a wake & bake accompanied with delicious breakfast food so you can take a nap by noon?

The flavors in your meal are going to stand out as your sense of taste and hunger is awakened by the cannabis. Is there anything more romantic than a relaxing meal for two to start your day?

Wine & Weed

Not everyone likes to pair cannabis and alcohol, but if you and your partner are open to the idea, it can make for a lot of fun. In fact, Leafly has a pairing chart that helps you identify some great flavor profile pairings. For example, the citrus flavors in Pinot Grigio pair well with the sweet flavor of Golden Lemons.

Get Artsy

Does cannabis spark your creativity?

Does your date like to get their hands dirty? Spending the evening at home painting is perfect for a date night. Bring out your inner Bob Ross and try painting a canvas together to display on the wall.

CANNABIS MAY HELP TO RELIEVE RHEUMATOLOGIC DISEASE SYMPTOMS.

Symptoms vary from condition to condition, but these illnesses affect your ability to complete everyday tasks. For example, rheumatic diseases impact the bones, muscles, tendons, joints, and ligaments.

A French study involving participants with rheumatic disease reports that nearly 20% of participants use cannabis for pain management. Here are a few highlights of the study:

RESEARCH

Researchers in Clermont-Ferrand, France, reviewed the scientific literature on the prevalence of cannabis use in the relief of rheumatologic diseases.

RELIEF

The review included nearly 11,000 patients, and nearly 3,000 said they used cannabis for pain management and received relief from it, according to the authors.

THERAPEUTIC

Further, the investigators noted the potential for clinical therapeutic use, presumably involving medical marijuana.

To understand the potential for pain management with cannabis, consider your body's endocannabinoid system and the entourage effect. This system manages numerous functions in your body, including memory, pain, mood, and other factors.

Cannabinoids impact your endocannabinoid system, resulting in the favorable effects reported following cannabis use. CB1 and CB2 cannabinoid receptors are found in your brain and nervous system. Your body produces chemical compounds that bind to these receptors to maintain hormonal balance. Cannabis may enhance these effects.

The entourage effect describes the combined effect of terpenoids, flavonoids, and cannabinoids supported by some studies and cannabis enthusiasts.
